Coding Audits - Diagnostic & Interventional Radiology

Are you receiving all of the revenue to which you are entitled? Would your records stand up to the scrutiny of the OIG or some other third party? According to the most recent OIG audit, most "overpayments" can be attributed to insufficient documentation or no documentation for services billed in the patient's medical record. In addition, coding compliance audits are a key element in identifying reimbursement issues and other potential problems such as fraud and abuse. A coding compliance audit examines the adequacy of documentation in the medical record against the accuracy of CPT code and ICD-9 code assignment. Specifically, these audits are helpful in identifying instances of lost revenue. Based on the findings of an audit, we will take whatever action is necessary to help you obtain the proper level of reimbursement for services rendered, such as improving documentation processes or providing coder education.
